Antarctica is the coldest, windiest and driest continent. It contains 90 percent of all of the ice on Earth in an area just under times the size of the United States. But the southernmost continent is much more than a big block of ice. Antarctica is the icy continent at the South Pole. Antarctica is often called The Frozen Continent . Look at the map of Antarctica, there are no countries on this.

Antarctica. Antarctica, fifth in size among the world's continents. Its landmass is almost wholly covered by a vast ice sheet. The other answer by Sachin Kumar is correct. Continents are big landmasses and human population has nothing to do with it. > Wikipedia's definition.
