

An examination of how people have thought about and written about living with and without God from 70,000 BCE to the present. The book reviews the most common concepts of God held by humans and the major reasons why people say they need God in their lives. Topics include whether morality could exist without God and whether there could be a universe without God. Concludes with the relationship among God, religion, and evil, and how people who do not believe in God can lead moral and happy lives.
